Structured Systems Improve Practice Efficiency and Patient Outcome

Objective: Preparation may be half the battle (or maybe even a little more than half in our changing world of healthcare), but structure and consistency are the keys to success. In private practice, understanding the needs of your patients and maintaining a high standard of care, can only be accomplished through thorough teamwork, planning and making necessary changes. Join us as we demonstrate the importance of developing and implementing “how to” guides for every aspect of practice (from scheduling, insurance eligibility and collections to preparing for the clinic day, setting up procedures and patient education). Although presented for podiatric assistants, physicians are welcome to attend as detailed checklists, training guides and protocols will be shared throughout the presentation allowing both doctors and team members to implement changes and improvements first thing on Monday morning!

We will also review timelines; when to start planning, how long it may take to start your own practice and all the checkboxes you need to start marking off now in order to succeed.

Reason for Visit/Most Pressing Issue (Mastering the Art of Patient Evaluation)

Objective: Does this ever happen in your practice? A patient calls to schedule an appointment and a "reason for visit" is noted. Upon arrival, a medical assistant evaluates the patient and discovers a much different chief complaint than previously recorded. Following the doctor's assessment however, it is determined that the patient's actual reason for visit is . . . It happens all the time! So, what can we do to improve the level of accuracy in discovering the true reason for visit and in situations where multiple complaints are relayed, determining the most pressing issue? While this problem is one that can never completely be avoided, we can greatly reduce its frequency by training both administrative and clinical team members to ask the right/appropriate questions and to become proficient in redirecting patients who are easily distracted. Join us for a 60-minute interactive presentation where Cindy Pezza, PMAC utilizes her experience (and acting skills) to portray "colorful" patients and to teach improved methods of triage and evaluation.
